HOBART HIGH SCHOOL
36 EAST 8TH STREET
HOBART, INDIANA 46342

If you drove past Hobart High School, you would probably see a beleaguered school building that doesn't seem very different from any other. However, if you were to go beneath the surface of that brick facade, you would see a place where over 1,200 students and staff members spend over nine months each year, five days each week, and seven hours each day. They are the heart and soul of Hobart High School, and each moment is filled with a variety of emotions, from laughter and exhilaration to tears

the surface and despair. And each day people busy with classes, lunches, activities, athletics, and socializing travel the hallways of HHS. Come with us and discover what happens beneath the surface.

7) Concerned that Iraq could assemble nuclear weapons within months if it chose, the United Nations required Iraq to disclose and disarm its weapons of mass destruction. The United Nations conducted weapon inspections in Iraq after the United States claimed that Iraq omitted weapons in its declaration, and the United States prepared to go to war.

8) The Anaheim Angels won games six and seven of the all-California World Series, edging out the San Francisco Giants. Threats of a late-season baseball strike had fans wondering whether there would be a series, but the strike was averted with a new labor contract that included a revenue-sharing plan and a drug prevention program.

9) The West Nile virus captured the nation's attention during the summer as it spread from coast to coast. The mosquito-transmitted virus, which leads to fever, head and body aches, and sometimes encephalitis or meningitis, killed approximately 250 citizens.

Social studies teachers retire

Mr. Mike Brown and Mr. Tom Workman retired from the HHS social studies department in June.

Teaching for 26 of his 36 years at HHS, Mr. Brown was a graduate of Gary Lew Wallace High School. He received his bachelor's and master's degrees in history from Indiana University.

Mr. Brown began his career at Gary Horace Mann High School in 1967. He started teaching U.S. history, economics, world history, consumer economics, and state and local history.

He decided to retire because he was experiencing health problems that "zapped" his energy and desire to teach, but he plans to travel, volunteer, and assist people that need help.

When Mr. Brown looked back on his choice to become a teacher, he couldn't see himself working in any different career. He also commented that he'll miss the friendly staff, "my home away from home," and the nice students. He added that he would not miss the rude and obnoxious students.

Mr. Brown's best experience was when several students won honors, like in stock market games, but his worst were when students and colleagues died.

Also retiring, Mr. Tom Workman has been teaching for 35 years. He began his career teaching at Gary Career Center and at Hobart Middle School. He also coached boys' basketball and boys' and girls' golf.

Mr. Workman said he'll miss students and many of the people that he has worked with in the past 35 years, but he will not miss the increasing paperwork.

Mr. Workman chose the career of teaching because he felt it was a "noble" profession, and he knew that being a teacher can make a difference.

A memory that he felt would stay with him forever was when he is out somewhere and an ex-student stops him to say hello and tells him that he/she remembers his class (usually in a positive way).

One of Mr. Tom Workman's several retirement gifts was a pair of smiley face boxer shorts, presented to him by Mr. Steve Peterson, assistant principal.

At the Hobart Teachers' Association retirement banquet, Mr. Don Rogers presented Mr. Tom Workman and Mr. Mike Brown with gifts from the HTA.

Mr. Mike Brown fulfills one of his fantasies, leaving HHS on his last day in a helicopter, which was provided by members of his family.

From the tiny little girl pulling on my leg and tugging at my heartstrings to the 8-year-old asking with wide-eyed anticipation, "What's it like to drive, Mommy?", the memories have come flooding back and seem to overpower me. I will always have so many wonderful memories of you because the essence of who you are is recorded in every fiber of my being. I've known you forever and yet it will never be long enough.

You have a lifetime of memories to make for yourself and this is only the beginning. You have worked so hard and have always made your dad and I very proud. Embrace the future with enthusiasm. You have given us more joy than any parent deserves and we love you very much.

Love,
Mom, Dad, Daniel, Timmy & Tyler

Preschool was trying. You spent some days crying,
But you learned to love school.
Your life's been so full of lessons, friends, and fun.
It's really just begun. The future shines bright.
Your goals are in sight.
There's so much in store. Always reach for more. . .

And if you get the chance
To sit it out or dance,
We hope you “dance”!

Charlie Shinneman My Sweet Son

No matter where I go
No matter what I do
I want you to know
I'm always thinking of you.

I miss your hellos
I miss your good-byes
Sometimes I miss you so bad
It just makes me cry.

You're getting so big,
becoming a man
At your own will,
all in God's plan.

Time is not waiting for anything
It scares me to think,
soon you'll be leaving.

So spread your wings as far
as they will go.
The sky is the limit, you'll reach it, I know.

To laugh and to cry
We've shared them both
Memories I cherish,
More than you know.

If times get tough and you're
Feeling all alone.
I want you to know you
Can always come home

I know you couldn't stay
Except for a little while
But I hope during that time, I can Bring back that sweet smile.

So, My Sweet Son,
No matter where you go
No matter what you do
Please don't ever forget
How very much I Love You.

Love Always, Forever and a Day, Mom

the 1990s, the number of people in the UK who are employed in the public sector has increased by 1.5 million, from 2.5 million in 1980 to 4 million in 1998 (Department of Health 1999). The number of people employed in the health sector has increased by 1.2 million, from 2.2 million in 1980 to 3.4 million in 1998.

There is a growing emphasis on the need to improve the quality of care and services provided by the public sector. This has led to a number of initiatives, including the introduction of the Health Act 1999, which sets out the framework for the regulation of health care. The Act requires health care providers to meet certain standards of quality and safety, and to be subject to external regulation. It also introduces a new system of accreditation for health care providers, which will require them to demonstrate that they meet certain standards of quality and safety.

In addition to the Health Act 1999, there are a number of other initiatives that are aimed at improving the quality of care and services provided by the public sector. These include the introduction of the Health Care Commission, which is responsible for monitoring and regulating the quality of health care services; the introduction of the Health Care Act 2001, which sets out the framework for the regulation of health care; and the introduction of the Health Care Act 2003, which sets out the framework for the regulation of health care.

The first part of the paper discusses the importance of the research and the objectives of the study. It then presents a literature review of the existing research on the topic. The methodology section describes the research design and the data collection process. The results section presents the findings of the study, and the conclusion section summarizes the main findings and provides recommendations for future research.

The study was conducted in a laboratory setting, and the data were collected using a series of experiments. The results of the experiments were analyzed using statistical methods, and the findings were compared with the results of previous studies. The study found that the research objectives were achieved, and the results were consistent with the findings of previous studies.

The study also found that there are several factors that influence the results of the research. These factors include the experimental design, the data collection process, and the statistical methods used. The study provides recommendations for future research, including the need for more rigorous experimental design and the use of more advanced statistical methods.

In conclusion, the study found that the research objectives were achieved, and the results were consistent with the findings of previous studies. The study also found that there are several factors that influence the results of the research, and it provides recommendations for future research.
